The new camera controls include an innovative On-Screen Proximity Radar, which provides genuine player movement and cover, including for full-backs. Shift, which has been a long-sought feature, allows players to shift the ball if under pressure in situations where it would not have been possible with previous game engines. This was inspired by playing FIFA Ultimate Team, where players would create or download challenges based on the matches they were having on the game. In FIFA 22 we're taking the franchise into exciting new directions by using technology to truly reinvent the game. "There has been a steady progression in real-time technology over the last few years," said Gianni Infantino, FIFA VP of Marketing and Communication. "We're even closer than we've ever been to providing players with the most immersive, fluid, authentic and emotionally connected experience possible. It means that for the first time in the long history of the franchise, fans will experience football in a whole new way in FIFA 22. "Technology is more powerful than ever before, allowing us to take players' stories in FIFA deeper than ever before. It allows the sport to be more deeply embedded into the gameplay, putting fans right into the action. And it truly allows us to reinvent FIFA as a football game." Refinement and innovation in real-time is at the heart of FIFA 22. The host of improvements and user-facing innovations include a revolutionary AI system that has been improved and expanded on a number of levels with greater customisation, learning, mindset, behaviour and verve. Enhanced naturalism and weather effects have been included, with snow, wind and rain being some of the many enhancements. FIFA Football has also been made easier and faster to play, with the removal of the goalkeepers and the full-backs having been removed. In addition to the "HyperMotion" technology, gameplay has been improved in a number of key areas, such as shooting, dribbling, passing, holding, shooting from distance, poacher and heading. The goalkeeper has been enhanced and there are a number of other gameplay changes. The improved movement and player control is unique in that it relies on the player actually moving the ball without needing to hold the button down. The controls themselves are in place to replicate the feeling of real-life football. For example, we rely on players picking up the ball quickly, dribbling down the pitch and releasing the shot - something that may have been difficult with previous
