What's New in the?

Two years ago, I was lucky enough to tour the same space that is now the Condor Theatre. That was the first time I'd been to the cinema since I'd been injured and ended up in hospital. It was a different experience because I was able to travel back in time. At that stage, I was still doing a lot of film work but I'd stopped acting. Still, it was weird because it was almost like I was sitting in a cinema on my own and was going through people's experiences. I had a reflection-on-my-life moment of that. What is the greatest thrill for you in working in film? Without sounding too cheesy, it's still that feeling of, when you watch a film, you wonder, 'Well, how did they do that? How did they get it to look that way?' The process of filming a TV series is very different. You're spending all this time away from your family. The biggest challenge in TV is that it's not just about doing the task, you've got to do it in a way that connects with viewers and is funny and understandable. That's something I work at with my partner in the new series. We've written a story that's part of a whole world, a universe and a science-fiction world. The greatest challenge is to have that concept in the script be clear enough to tell the story, and not to work myself up in knots until something weird happens. If you're too worried, you just end up confused. You'
