Q: ASP.NET Session Lifetime and timeout I have two projects in the same solution. Project A: contains all the data that i need to access in Project B. Project B is .NET 4, and contains a Page: Page1.aspx: has an Update Panel, inside the Update Panel, i have placed two asp:SqlDataSource controls. Both the datasources refer to the same table in the database and they are both set to a single parameter named UserId (int type). When Project A user start a session, he can select any row of the database, and save data about that row, in a dictionary using UserId as the key to access the data. After the user ends the session Project A should save the dictionary value in the Session (because it uses the UserId as the key, and after Session ends, the dictionary will be saved, so the user can resume his session whenever he wants). After the Session is saved, Project B user is redirected to Page1.aspx, and it shows all the data he saved 6d1f23a050
