Related Media WEST LAFAYETTE - You're not the only one who is visiting Tippecanoe County on a family vacation this week. The Indiana State Department of Health will test about 2,000 travelers arriving in or departing from Indiana airports between July 24 and Aug. 7 for tickborne diseases such as Lyme disease. Ten,000 people are expected to visit or leave the state in the 12-day period, said Jane S. Belknap, the department's health officer. Of those, about 700 people are expected to visit Tippecanoe County from out of state, said Cynthia Mohs, the health department's director of epidemiology. Those people are checked for Lyme, but thousands of people at home or overseas are also tested for tickborne diseases. The testing is being done by the laboratory at the Indiana State Department of Health in Indianapolis. Those who are positive for Lyme disease may receive treatment with anti-inflammatory medication if they live in a state like Indiana, but there is no cure for the disease, which is spread by the bite of ticks infected with the bacteria Borrelia burgdorferi, said Belknap. New York and Connecticut have been able to eliminate the illness by using screening tests, while Missouri, Wisconsin and Minnesota have not, she said. "In places where there has been an increase of Lyme disease, we are hearing about the value of those screening tests," Belknap said. Those who test positive are told to get their tick-bites checked, 6d1f23a050
